"Don't Piss Down My Back and Tell Me It's Raining"

Pulling out of a Loves Truck Stop, on my way to Pendleton, Oregon to pick up a motorcycle (my decision to quit riding lasted 28 days), I lost the signal for a podcast I was listening to and had to settle for a half/hour of NPR lies, delivered-up in a sing-song voice.

I arrived at my friend's house numb, more than that, mummified by a realization that the world out there that I assumed to be ignorant, and maybe would be made right by presenting the facts, has crossed the line from ignorance into a realm of malfeasance.

The NPR subject was Ukraine, and, as with RussiaGate, not a single thing was spoken that raised a question or clarified Putin's motivation about what led-up to the invasion. This morning, heading home, I tuned into NPR again, with commercials urging that we 'do our share' and get 'vaccinated' and a non-discussion about 'free speech'.

I don't listen to corporate news, but, once in a while it helps with 'knowing the enemy'. This morning they presented their template for dealing with 'inalienable rights', as guaranteed in the Bill of Rights—starting out with platitudes supporting 'free speech', then indecorously shifting to why 'free speech' needs restricted—globally.

'Free speech' restrictions, mandated globally, avoiding the Bill of Rights, are being proposed by the likes of Jacinda Ardern, the New Zealand PM, who earlier dictated a full-tilt lockdown of her island nation, which, like Australia, resulted in a sweeping Covid plague. Clinging to power, she now foments for global 'misinformation' speech bans—forgetting that her 'irrational' shut-down of NZ destroyed an economy, while promoting shortened, compromised lives, and possible death for 'vaccinated' young children.

Ardern, a protégée of Klaus Schwab, abides in the 'evil' camp with Klaus protegee, Ursula von der Leyen, unelected President of the European Commission, as shown in her State of Union speech: "Let us be very clear—much is at stake. Not just for Ukraine, but for all of Europe and the world at large. This is not only a war unleashed by Russia against Ukraine, this is also a war on our energy. It's a war on our economy. It's a war on our values. It's a war on our future. This is autocracy against democracy."

Ursula, like Jacinda (who cares, not at all, for the will of her people), says right out that she will support Ukraine no matter what citizens of the EU have to say about it. German Chancellor Scholz is of the same mind—the UKR decision has been made.

The West runs on lies. It's now reported that Russia was willing to stop at the Donbas and make peace, but Boris Johnson, a US puppet, scuttled that. So, there will be no peace and Russian has taken expected but hastened steps, for reserve mobilization, and referendums in 4 UKR regions that voted 87, 93, 97, and 99% to join Russia.

It happens now because the game is changing as it becomes apparent that this is a war is between Russia and the entire West, which is betting everything on Ukraine and committing most of its hardware to the fight. At stake: if Ukraine wins, Russia is set back decades, but if Ukraine loses, there is no Ukraine, no NATO, and no dollar.

With Russian mobilization, Ukraine and NATO stand no chance because NATO has already 'shot its wad', depleting its military hardware to levels of anxiety. As for Russia, assimilating these regions into the Russian Federation assures that they will be protected under the Russian Constitution and defended at all costs as part of Russia.

Russian mobilization was needed when it became apparent that dollars, equipment, and intelligence, mainly from the US, flowed seemingly without end, making the SMO (Special Military Operation), no longer practical. Instead, Russia needed to defend these regions, mainly populated by Russians, as part of the Russian Federation.

Russia has huge military reserves (25 million), much of which has combat experience. This mobilization of 300K amounts to only a small % of reserves, but makes it impossible for Ukraine/NATO to mount counter-offensives as all gaps in Russian troop lines will be filled. With a declaration of war, the gloves come off and Ukraine loses.

This time next year the war will probably be over with Ukraine having surrendered unconditionally. But the period between then and now is likely to be the most dangerous time in human history. Consider a frightful comparison: Back before Russia invaded, Biden and Co., instead of negotiating, almost daily speculated on the exact moment Putin would invade Ukraine—after they themselves had perpetuated the tragedy.

Now, the talk is about Russia conducting nuclear war on the UKR/West, an assessment that is at best a 'misinterpretation' of Russia's policy, and, at worse, is 'lies' meant to goad Russia into a nuclear 1st strike—something Russia has no intention of doing.

Today we have Nord Stream 1 and 2 set back years by underwater demolition. A former Polish PM praised the US for taking the action, but the propaganda impetus will be to do a RussiaGate and somehow sway opinion to blame Russia—even though, Russia had Nord Stream turned off. Blaming Russia for destroying Nord Stream is analogous to blaming Russia for attacking its own troops at the UKR nuclear plant.

How 'dense' must be the German Chancellor and the EU President to not see they are being played by the US? And how dense to assume the EU population will starve and freeze to death in complacency? How out of touch is EU leadership to cast this tragedy as a war on German energy? Putin was supplying Germany with fuel. Russia did not sanction the EU—the EU backed the sanctions. A war on the German economy? Germany made trillions from billions on Russian NG. A war on the German 'economy', 'values', and Germany's 'future'? This gives rise to my "Outlaw Josey Wales" title.

I haven't written for days and the lies keep piling-up. I listened to some hours of Pharma treachery on the drive home. What's being done to the 'good docs', Peter McCullough, Pierre Kory, and Paul Marik needs an article. The monsters who destroyed our economy are in league with politicians who are pushing for nuclear armageddon, and inextricably tied to Pharma. They are evil that needs exposed and taken down.
