55 Days Until The Future Gets Here

Something's happening tonight. Is it the Oscars? No, it's another spectacle—the presidential debate. I already know who I'm voting for and since neither of them interests me, so I won't be watching. This election is best portrayed by Bob Dylan in his song, Desolation Row where "the beauty parlor's filled with sailors and the circus is in town."

Who I'm not voting for is Kamala, that cackling moron, repackaged as presidential. She and Joe have possibly already destroyed the US with their immigration policy which will likely play out in uncontrollable gang violence and terrorism. Basically mean-hearted/self-serving, if put in a room with Elizabeth Warren and 2 yellow legal pads, within an hour Kamala would be able to render every hard-earned dollar of wealth owned by Americans as negotiable—as needed for the servicing of bloated budgets.

Kamala Harris and the left want to take care of economic imbalance by taxing the rich, when the cause for economic ruin and inflation is found in counterfeit/unproductive dollars—not the rich. Were the 'tax the rich' left at all curious, they could determine with a simple question (even from Google), just how many $s the rich actually possess.

The entire fortune of the 1% is $37T, against a US national debt of $35T—soon to exceed exceed total wealth of the 1%—especially with the addition of $200T in unfunded liabilities. Kamala and Liz would come back with—tax any and all that have wealth. But the real wealth resides in the 1%, more wealth there than the bottom 50%.

Besides, once the tax the wealth bunch get going—they will steal all wealth. For anyone interested, search Rebel Capitalist, George Gammon/Robert Barnes, investigating malfeasance in 47 states using property tax treachery to fund bloated budgets.

Besides, with the debt growing at a trillion dollars every few months, and another big spender coming in (whoever's president), inflation, without spending cuts, is our future.

Americans are about to experience a 3rd-world wakeup-call that will abruptly alter our futures—economic trajectories/lifestyles. And, except for a feeling they can't shake, they are unaware of the facts. Layoff percentages are closing in on the Great Depression—but everything is fine. Americans polled about losing their jobs see no indication.

Some pundits forecast a long future for the dollar as the reserve currency. They see the BRICS nations, by necessity, tied to the dollar as a settlement currency, with a supposition it will take years before they can do without our settlement infrastructure.

The BRICS are the BRICS because the US made them that way. When an empire steals $350B from a nation (without a declaration of war), the rest of the world takes notice. Especially when the empire has a sordid past of destabilizing nations with color revolutions, so as to maintain dominance. Direct theft of assets (of a nuclear power), gets the attention of all nations. ASAP, they do what needs done to escape that empire.

Once subjected to the facts, the empire is seen for what it is, decayed/rancid—all the way through. It only takes a single action, such as stealing foreign reserves, to put the facts in motion. Lies are everywhere: to see the 'vaccines' exposed for the fraud they are: The HighWire, ICAN attorney, Adam Siri, presents to New Hampshire Legislature.

More lies masquerading as facts are found in reporting the invasion of Ukraine: Putin invaded without cause—he had options besides invasion. He did not. Since the US/UKR coup, 2014, 14K Russian speakers were slaughtered in the Donbas, and, in response to Putin's demand that Russia's security concerns be met, Tony Blinkin made it clear that nuclear missiles would be placed in Ukraine at the discretion of the US.

Since that invasion the US/NATO has been shown to be a paper tiger. The fear now, is that before the election, a Western plethora of nations will attack Russia—to secure the presidency and control of congress. The irony being the possibility that a plethora of nations/NATO, together, aren't capable of taking on their object of ridicule—Russia.

Many Russia haters are among our pundits—Alasdair McCloud for one. I follow his economic commentary, but geopolitically his comments don't rise to the level of analysis. On Russia's invasion of Ukraine, he's another neocon—viewing Putin as a thug, invading without justification, and, and apparently AI supports NATO's mission, to drive a wedge in Putin's goal? What goal, AI? Russia/China, Alasdair doesn't like those guys.

What would AI would he do with the idea Russia is the freest speech zone in the world, at present? Or, Russia as a crucible for—fair elections/free press/open debate?

I'm voting for Trump: the guy who threatened that if Putin invaded while he was president, missiles would rain down on St. Petersburg and Moscow—the guy who will make America Great Again through debt-addled sanctioning of other nations—the guy who's view of Zionism, bought/sold with Shel Adelson money, will inflict horror on Palestinians—while reminding us he knows how to deal with these Palestinian demonstrators.

Yep, I'm voting for Trump—the guy who got hoodwinked by Fauci/Birx—still advocating for mRNA—the guy who employed Bolton/Pompeo as national security advisor/Sec/State to assure we go to war—the guy who boasts he can end the Ukraine War in 1 day, even though he sanctioned Russia to where he has only 12% Russian approval.

Why am I voting for Trump? With a prayer that, as an egotistical nationalist, he will not take steps of no return/destroy our nation (I have no faith the left will refrain from that). And Trump might rather default on a debt (he will be partially responsible for), than steal from Americans after it comes clear that his policies of sanctioning—failed.

I'm voting for Trump, but I fear these next 55 days—so what am I doing instead? Realizing that when it all comes down around us there will be no settlement currency. What we will be left with is our wit and what we have—that others want. 1 oz. bottles of booze? 22 long rifle/223—for sure. Tools, etc. But for shopping at the market, pre-65, 90%, dimes and quarters. 10/25 cents, not that 1 oz. silver coin worth 100s of dollars.

With no change for purchases, coin of the realm, dimes and quarters, recognizable silver, will become a basis of barter. Those dimes are out there now, cheap. Any waiting until after the election to buy some food, ammo, and dimes—I wish you good luck.
