A Planet and a Constitution—At Risk for Extinction

My friend, Bill Holter, is thinking there will be no midterms. That something will happen to cause the elections to be called-off. If he is correct, that would necessitate an event of staggering dimension—something like a nuclear detonation that could be blamed on the Russians (although most nations would recognize a US 'October Surprise'). If a nuclear 'surprise' were to happen, the circumstances surrounding it would be vital because, if Russia judged it to be an existential threat to Russia, they would go-out as martyrs, after unleashing their nuclear arsenal on the West, rendering humanity extinct.

Assuming there is to be no nuclear detonation, something that results in 'martial law' would have to be imposed in the US. This would be America's ultimate political threat, putting the Constitution along with the republic on the 'chopping block of extinction'.

The US Constitution makes no provision for the federal government to call-off elections. Elections are the purview of states and not subject to federal intervention. If 'martial law' were declared, it would be an unconstitutional act—as is the case with republican lawmakers impeded from accessing data on 'voting rights' changes, state to state—hampered to assure that the reins of power remain in the hands of the 'left'.

Consider the trials of Alex Jones. Whatever you think of Jones, he is denied free speech rights during his trials—where there is little difference between Jones and Julian Assange, manacled in a glass box. Jones is not free to profess his innocence or offer explanations. And Steve Bannon (I'm no fan), just got 6 months for refusing to appear before the Jan 6th committee—a phony show trial if ever there was one.

Bill Holter might yet be proven correct as we are in a time, the only time, when agencies such as the FBI and DOJ are unabashed supporters of 1 political party—utilizing taxpayer dollars to keep that party in power. If they cannot prevail, it is likely that, 'when' republicans win both the House and Senate, both the President and the Attorney General will be brought to justice under the Constitution—within months.

Americans, basking in thoughtless complacency, limit how far their imaginations are allowed to wander, and can't conceive that what happened in Iraq one 'Sunni' afternoon could happen here. Saddam Hussein looked down upon lawmakers and read from a list of names—who were then taken roughly—to their extinction.

Because of ever-increasing disregard for the 'rule of constitutional law'—anything is now possible. The 'left' has become dangerous, having made of serious misjudgments, based on failed assumptions, each of which is now looming—as lethal danger.

Concerning Ukraine, a 'leftist' meme persists that Ukraine will be victorious, and Putin will be ousted. Instead, the war in Ukraine (a war between the US and Russia, with NATO as a junior partner) will end in bitter defeat for the West, sometime in 2023.

A few months back, democrats used equally faulty assumptions to convince themselves they would win the midterms—keeping the House and Senate. Now, reality is showing itself out on the horizon, as awaiting peril—with approval ratings for Biden in the 12% range, and common knowledge he is not right in the head. Also, the 'left' know the shenanigans of 2020 will not be possible to replicate with all eyes watching.

Leaving us with unanswered questions: With 2 weeks and a day before a 'midterm reckoning', what risks are the Biden Bunch willing to take in Ukraine? And, given that losing the midterms badly could see Biden family members in jail, what might they do to save Obama and Co. plans to stop a return of Trump—or a DeSantis election?

Defeat in Ukraine will expose the 'left', who used to be the party of 'anti war' when 'hawks' were republicans', as warmongers. With Tulsi Gabbard's 'apostasy' (dumping the democrat party), no anti-war voice remains on the 'left' side of the aisle—including AOC and Bernie. 'Anti war' voices are few and on the conservative side of the aisle.

It's tragicomic, the way Tulsi's departure gets skewed by the left as 'Putin's Puppet' or 'political aspirer', by those same voices that see no historic/logical necessity for Russia's invasion of Ukraine. They can't fathom Tulsi as a real person, acting ethically.

It's difficult for any in Congress that each 2 years vote for obscene defense budgets (used to oppress and murder around the globe), to actually engage in dialogue about 'who done what'. And because there is neither dialogue nor concern for the security of other nations, could the insanity level in DC, along with jargon about Russia using tactical nukes, reach a level of depravity where, in early November, we use 1?

This may seem absurd speculation, but not long ago when, at NATO's behest, Ukrainian troops were massing along the Donbas border, what we heard from Biden, every few minutes, was a surmise that Russia was getting ready to invade—without any facts. So, endless US chatter about Russian plans to use nukes, does that set up a 'false flag', as did Syrian chemical-weapon attacks, for a crime we will perpetrate?

When we thought it couldn't get worse, German lackeys, who will freeze this winter after NS 1/2 were blown up, say they know who did it but they won't say. Post a freezing winter without heat and manufacturing jobs, they'll be missing Merkel, who opposed Russian sanctions, and kept things cool with Putin so as to keep warm.

Back home in the States, the FBI and the DOJ have become 'rogue entities', but rogues that are aligned with neoliberals. This is a common phenomena in the breakdown of an empire where no one is really in charge, and what you get is 'diversity politics' played out on a national and global scale—with everybody in it for themselves.

Yet the empire, as with its means of settlement, the dollar, persists—if just for now. Democratic lawmakers in Congress openly champion empire through their unexamined support for Ukraine while 14th Amendment guarantees are disallowed for conservative legislators who question the 2020 election. Free speech has become a bad joke.

Along with my simple test for whether you belong in the class of those who just want to be left alone or those who will never leave you alone, I have a new rule: Any who use rhetoric to attack my motive/character rather than address inconsistencies in my argument (ad hominem attacks)—are required to hear 3 minutes of uninterrupted facts.
