Are You're Not Paying Attention—Or Beyond Hope?

If you think I will refrain from criticizing Trump and his Neocons—you're sadly mistaken.

We find ourselves in the plot of Star Wars, where the Empire is the Empire and we are in the Millennium Falcon, mostly made of spare parts. On the screen, we win, but in real life, as the song says: it ain't necessarily so. And it might not change with Trump.

Today, I got an email from a reader who advised, with regard to my critique of Trump: that I had lost sight of wisdom; that Donald Trump is inarguably a builder, fighting against destroyers; and until I break from this paradigm, I'll continue to lose readers.

I voted, more than once for Trump—each time holding my nose. Russia developed hypersonic missiles because Trump ended the INF nuclear treaty—supposedly for a better deal. That's bullshit. Bolton told him to do it—and Trump didn't it know any better.

Damascus, Syria, the oldest continuously inhabited capital in the world is now the domain of terrorists, or land grabbers—Israel, Turkey and the good old US of A. Assad did little good for his people (that he did not gas), but Syria fell largely because of Trump, who stole their oil/grains, and sanctioned Syria into oblivion. For those who care to not lose sight of wisdom, the stolen oil went to Israel—to carry-out genocides.

As for losing readers, I lost readers over mRNA, Putin's invasion, Fed policy, Obama—way back, Israel, as God's chosen people (relying on Deuteronomy for support of apartheid/mass murder), for confronting lies about Hamas conducting rape/baby beheadings—and the Israeli Hannibal Directive: 100s of Oct. 7 deaths were done by the IDF. Israel kills its own rather than being taken as hostages. You think not? Research it.

Maybe, I'll lose all my readers, but so far, the threat is empty. I began with 7 readers—now I spend time sending my articles in lots of 500. With my critique of Trump, to date, I've lost 7 readers and gained 9. Maybe others are taking a close look at Trump?

Respected commentators are appalled at his appointment of neocons, and fear for the 1st Amendment. But, I don't regret voting for Trump—just another flawed individual.

Trump's a builder? No he isn't. I'm a builder of many houses, commercial building projects, on which I drove the nails. Trump, is a mover/shaker financier, who licenses his name as a branding mechanism. Trump couldn't size a rafter or joist to save his life.

Why do we have to go to war with Iran? Because Trump cannot abide Iran having a nuclear weapon. How is it Iran is close to a nuclear weapon? Because Trump selected Bolton as National Security Adviser (Bolton trashed a nuclear treaty with DPRK under Clinton). Bolton got Trump to abandon the JCPOA, which forbade Iran to have nukes.

I don't write for readers. I write for myself and edit myself when I get new information. When my readers offer to make a financial contribution to support my work, I decline, because I don't want anything holding back what I think. I already question my courage to say what I really think—knowing the disagreement and animosity awaits out there.

But, I really don't care because I have the Paul Robeson complex (baritone singer in the earlier 1900s). His gravestone reads: An artist must select—to fight for freedom, or slavery. I made my decision—I had no choice. Paul had no choice and neither do I. I want the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. Keep your beliefs to yourself.

Until I got that email, I had some good things to say about Trump. He uses bluster to shake up the room, and then goes after what he really wants. That works—sometimes.

Trump can't admit to being taken-in by SARS/flu/Fauci/Birx, or targeting Soleimani was a dumb-ass move. Taking responsibility for destroying Syria is just too much, but some things Trump does, I appreciate. It's A Wonderful Life plot that Trump names Bhattacharya as the new head of National Health. He was an early, foremost critic of Fauci—a great danger to America. This plot is seldom seen outside of Hollywood films.

Bhattacharya co-authored the Great Barrington Declaration, a mainstay against the SARS/2 insanity. For his support for natural immunity, the non-science of distancing, the uselessness of masks, and closing schools, he was cancelled/eviscerated by the medical hierarchy. Now this eminent scientist is chosen to head the deceivers—bravo!

And the illegals? Go Trump. There is nothing more threatening to the republic than an inability to enforce our borders. Get them out; use the military; get the criminals first. These are illegals that rate no due process. They don't belong here. And those governors/mayors that stand in the way of removing illegals—arrest them and charge them.

Now I want to get serious. A few months ago I was thinking Israel would be fortunate to exist for another year. But I forgot the comparison of the Resistance to the Empire in Star Wars. The Empire has the power. You can't assume divine justice will not win out—but it's not always the case that justice will be on hand—exactly when you need it.

That pager thing Israel did—that was out of the 3rd Reich playbook. But, in a world with no relationship to ethics, it worked. And Syria (at least for now), restructures the playing board. Netanyahu has a big victory and has turned the entire Syrian defense capability in rubble (that's his MO). And Erdogan gets to dream—his Ottoman Empire.

Russia/US may have to abandon the Syrian field, but the US might just get an invitation to stay—having never been invited in the 1st place. Worse yet for the resistance, the new ruler of Iran is backing away from confrontation. There may be no reprisal against Israeli terror—instead, a deal favoring the Empire—that Trump takes credit for?

So the resistance is the Houthis, Russia, China, whomever. China doesn't want a war—and Russia would rather not, but Russia won't go back on its objectives. Maybe I was wrong—the war in Ukraine was over. NATO lost—but will the Empire Strike Back?

Maybe Putin, if he gets his security concerns taken care of—will pull back from confrontations with Erdogan/Bibi/Trump—for some semblance of being left alone. Then Trump can go after the big prize—China. And why is that? China cannot be allowed a shot at taking down the dollar—no matter whether it's done in a fair competition or not.

Speaking of the dollar. With the Empire looking tough, gold and silver, for now, are losing their war. If you don't have any silver coins—you will never get a better chance.
