Beware The Big Personalities

A working analogy for our political climate is TR (Teddy Roosevelt), who became president in 1904. By 1908 he wanted out and handed it over to his friend, William Taft, who with TR's backing won the 1908 election—which resulted in ending their friendship.

TR, by force of his huge personality, took on monied interests in support of the little guy. But, as the head of the world's biggest economy, TR also wanted the US to flex its military muscle. Taft, wanted to reel-back the presidency to its Constitutional mandates.

Big personalities don't hold back for long, and the Republican Convention of 1912, found TR, duking it out with Taft for the nomination. TR had the people but Taft had the party—which gave him the nomination. TR, of course, could not abide that, so he formed the Bull Moose party, garnering more votes than Taft, splitting the vote, and giving us a little known, Woodrow Wilson, who would reek havoc on the nation and world.

Now we have our big personally, Trump, back for a 2nd term. Trump is a personality as large as TR—but maybe not as intelligent. As an example: Trump has warned the BRICS that ceasing to use the dollar would bring down on them the wrath of god (small caps). Doesn't Trump (or any of the fools surrounding him), understand that BRICS is nothing more than the result of US weaponizing the dollar and de-banking the world?

Putin reiterates that he is not against using the dollar—instead, he has been disallowed from using the dollar—cut out of Swift—effectively de-banked. Russia didn't sanction the US—the US sanctioned Russia for disagreeing with rules-based order.

Trump, unlike TR, has to tread lightly because he does not carry a big stick. Though he might prefer to ease sanctions on Russia to set a better climate for negotiations, he can't do that unilaterally because US power elite would brand him as a Putin puppet.

Trump has to get Putin to concede something first, but that's not easy because Putin is in the driver's seat. One possibility might be for Russia to allow an American investor to buy the NordStream pipeline—then the sanctions on NordStream could be lifted.

This would pit Trump against those reaping LNG profits, while increasing US control over Europe—for all its energy supply/needs. Maybe the art of the deal could strike a bargain with LNG profiteers—at the same time set conditions for peace negotiations?

Constitutionally, we have no business in Ukraine—or funding Netanyahu. Big American personalities have taken us far away from constitutional mandates. The defining characteristic, the fulcrum that balances what it to be an American patriot, is adherence to the Constitution/Bill of Rights. Few American elites are patriots, but an abundance of big personalities make their way into the halls of Congress and into the presidency.

Consider the last several presidents—measured against constitutionality. Start with Clinton who allegedly bombed a foreign nation because of a semen stain on a dress. Then came anti-American, Obama, selling-out the Constitution to a pack of globalists.

Next, Trump, who got rid of the INF treaty (which may culminate in the end of human history). Trump's big personality is getting ready to re-occupy the Oval Office which is hopefully a better result than the Obama tyranny selling out the US to WEF globalism.

So, replete with Trump danger—here we go. Unconstitutional American institutions include the FBI (the legacy of a J Edgar traitor to American values), Homeland Security, a useless-counterfeit appendage of 9-11/Dick Cheney. And the CIA, which Truman refused to fund. Allegedly, Dulles Bros found other sources—drug running proceeds.

So why is Trump nominating his parishioners to head these organizations rather than taking steps to end their existence? Follow the logic. 1 of 2 things is in play: either Trump is not an American constitutional patriot, or, he's playing 5th degree chess—brilliant moves to unfold later? Unfortunately, we saw what happened in his 1st term.

Biden belongs under a rubric of big personally (head of a crime family but able to stay out of jail), while perpetuating the slaughter of millions—raking graft off the top? Now, warmonger Joe seeks to render Trump (already dangerous enough), hamstrung.

Joe wants to perpetuate 2 slaughters: Ukraine and Palestine, while we were hopeful Trump only supported slaughter in the Middle East. The only question left to grapple with: will what is being done, climax in nuclear war—before or after inauguration day?

Trump played politics 1st term—that didn't work out so well. He needs to quit listening to the likes of Gorka/Waltz and admit it: NATO/US is responsible for Ukraine, and without a deal before the fact, sit down with Putin, without concern for art of the deal (we are way past the deal), and agree to accept Russia's security concerns, including a neutral, de-Nazified Ukraine. Territories already brought into Russia—remain Russia.

Quit weaponizing the dollar, and understand this is causing the US to become a pariah across the globe. Understand that lifting sanctions on Russia gives back to Russia what belongs to them—sanctions intended to give the US what doesn't belong to it.

How do we justify giving US tax dollars to Israel, using terrorism to blow up pagans, killing 1000 (many non-combatant women), to destabilize Lebanon—as constitutional? Where's the open debate on whether or not Israel deserves financial/military support?

This attack on Syria—which happened the day after the Lebanon truce. How long had it been planned? What was happening to the IDF in S. Lebanon that required a new war someplace else. It was Israel, backed by the US, and Turkey (re-dreaming the Ottoman Empire), that brought on a new war. To what end—to destabilize Russia/Iran.

Either we scrap the Constitution/Bill of Rights or admit to the facts. Even without Trump's traitorous nominees, there's no constitutional mandate for going to war with Iran (posing no threat to the US), sending armaments/dollars to Ukraine, or funding Netanyahu's horror show. Before taking issue with me on Iran, know that the US State Department, in its analysis of the principle 20 terrorist organizations, finds none that are sponsored by Iran. But the US openly conducts terrorism/assassination inside Iran.

We are left with 2 choices: either the Constitution is a useless relic that no longer matters or big personalities need reigned-in—returning control to citizens. You decide.
