Let's Give the Man an Honest Wait and See Chance?

This from a reader: 'I see myself as aligning with your positive skepticism...if Trump stays true to his election planks, perhaps there is hope, so let's give the man an honest wait n see chance.' This reader sees my view of Trump as somewhat hopeful, when, in fact, I have no hope for Trump. Instead, I see a warmonger, a regime-change colonizer, intent on controlling the world through coercion and force. A liar of grand proportion—not deserving trust.

Wasn't it the Nazi Minister of Propaganda, Joseph Goebbels, who said that a lie repeated enough—becomes the truth? And here we are, living in a world, barraged by lies intended to obscure the truth, causing some we've known for a long time to give up/give in, to buy into establishment lies, lies perpetuated 24/7—masquerading as a news cycle.

Today, a long time, close friend offered his assessment of political reality. He puts the blame with Islam and its desire to take over the world. He concluded: f... the Ayatollah. Is Islam a problem? You bet it is. Muslim migrants/illegals (for the most part), don't assimilate into Western culture. But, did the muslims ask to come here, or got here as part of a great migration set in motion by Brzezinski, Bush/Cheney, Wolfowitz, Biden, Blinken and Trump?

Islam is not the problem depicted. Over the networks, it's always the Iran-backed Houthis, or the Houthi terror group. Iran and Yemen are neither terrorists, nor do they have designs to take over the world. Iran does not invade other nations—Iran stands up for nations oppressed by Israel and the West. These cultures have ethics that the US lacks.

At best, the networks refer to the war in Iran as an Iran/US problem, but that's not true. It's a Trump problem, part of a grand vision intended to break up Iran, Russia and China. And, it doesn't matter that each year since 2007, US Intelligence has concluded there's no plan on Iran's part to build a nuclear weapon. Where there's an overarching diabolical plan, the truth dies.

What I haven't been focused on is what Trump's madness is doing to the domestic US economy and to Americans. Disregarding a plethora of propaganda redirecting institutional problems unto citizens as personal problems, as guilt, intended to keep us quiet, what happens, inevitably, when Trump causes home prices and stock prices to collapse—sooner rather than later?

A few things to think on: SpaceX, with an anticipated rate of growth, measured by the Fed expected inflation of 2%, will require 50 years to break even. With this in mind, Trump opened up the floodgates to allow the working class Americans to buy in—so the elites could sell out.

What about the Fed, and hopes for the new Chair, Kevin Warsh (who should know better), printing almost a billion dollars in fake money, each day, since taking over. Now inflation is double the Fed 2%—non-mandate?

Return on investment, this century, relies on printing of dollars that are backed by nothing. The Fed expanded its original mandate, to come to the assistance of stressed banks, to include price stability and full employment. Then came the 2% inflation target with a re-definition of price stability and full employment, culminating in no possibility of downturn in the stock market or uptick in unemployment. All at the behest of the likes of Trump.

The purpose for expanded mandates is to give the Fed control of counter-fit dollar creation, and since the Fed cares not a wit for Americans—they print. A plethora of dollars has found its way in stocks and housing, such that morons such as Mamdani, see price and rent controls as the fix. Just as Biden was the fix for Trump, and Trump the fix for Biden.

Lower rents come from more supply—rent control reduces supply. Ending rent control, increases supply, and rents fall. Rent control drives away developers. Because prices/costs are guaranteed to go up, across the board, with rent control, owners lack resources to upgrade, hence we get the term—slumlords. Using policy to govern humanity (in the main), is inhuman.

Rent control forces landlords to raise rents to the upper limits each year to maintain the value/sales potential of a property. Rent control harms landlords who maintain low rents in support of renters. If a rental is already underpriced and rent control is fixed at 3% a year, that also applies to any prospective buyers. Hence—the definition of an unsellable property.

Under rent control, tenants don't move, and landlords can't afford to keep up properties. Why am I focused on rents? Human beings need somewhere to live and something to eat. Without inflated desires for wealth, that's often enough for a happy family. But, having only necessities leave renters with few possibilities to own a home. Even condo HOAs are in the stratosphere.

We are not the modern enlightened society we've been made out to be. We are hunter-gathers descendants who required little to live life fully. Of a 2000 hunter-gatherer group, it's estimated that 2 were clinically depressed. That number has become 400. Our brains are wired to deal with maybe 100 people, not 8 billion. We competed for resources in a time when there were ample resources. Now, no matter where we turn, we are subject to control. What awaits on any horizon is equity/DEI—or warmongering colonization.

Even the NYT recognizes that it's over for the US in the Middle East. Each time the war becomes kinetic, Iran resumes assuring there will be no US bases in any gulf monarchies. Israel sits on the sidelines because Hezbollah is kicking-ass their ass in Lebanon, and Iran is capable of decimating what's left of Israel. With routes for Middle East oil shut-down or greatly compromised, it's but a short time until Trump is forced to bargain with Iran.

Beyond that, the blame flies. The US has depleted its weapon supply, according to Trump, because of Biden. Only partly true, we are out of weapons because we assumed Putin would fail quickly and Iran could be broken over a weekend. And the sad truth for Trump (good news for the rest of the world), is the US is unable resupply even its own weapons in any needed time frame, resulting in a reality that we cannot fight 1 war—forget about 3.

It's coming folks and it's not what we think—1929 was a 'walk in the park'. Back then we were, as Carl Sandburg described Chicago: 'The City of Big Shoulders'. Now we are resourceless and narrow-shouldered. We have hopes our silver stack and all those bullets from Sportsman's Warehouse will save us. But will they? A horror looms large.

I have articles waiting to post that I will hold back so as to not bury you. The next one focuses on Trump's dance sensation that's sweeping the globe. It's best to inject some humor in as world being emptied of fun.
