updates on the insane world of money and power

This Article Matters—Unless WW3 Breaks-Out in Jerusalem

Back around the turn of the century, reading Richard Russell daily (then later Jim Sinclair), I opted to forgo economists who posited a 5% holding in gold, (or none at all), to do the right thing: store my discretionary wealth in tangibles—mainly gold/silver coins.

Why is it the right thing? Because the freedom/liberty I've enjoyed from when I came to the US in 1956 was made possible because of 'inalienable rights' recognized in the Constitution/Bill of Rights. And because 'sound money' was and is the only money.

Back then, gold had laid dormant for more than a decade, and the 'financial screws' had not yet been tightened down. One could buy gold in one country and have it shipped to another—without an attached felony. Over 2 decades—that became history.

At times, holding gold/silver was a losing proposition—given price/timing. But I was comfortable as a constitutionalist—not one of those who take an oath, later to be disregarded, but choosing to live within narrow confines of the Constitution. And soon, I could delineate whether what masqueraded as law was constitutional or not—and why.

Adhering to US Constitution-al values brings with it—great sadness. The country of my birth, Canada, is in the grip of 'screaming hyenas', and I venture not, to cross that border. And, if I happen to have assets there, for now, I cannot access them. But even that gives me solace—I get to be a pirate with (allegorical) 'buried treasure'. I like that.

Canadians are expressing discomfort with the 'strictures of fascism' lorded over them by Mr. Castro/Ms. Freeland. As I write, there is the beginnings of a movement to elect to office, the leader of the 'Freedom Convoy', (hopefully as Prime Minister?). Critical of both parties for crushing liberty—the 'Freedom Convoy' supports 'liberty'. 'O Canada'.

Accelerating the threat to freedom, 'on the other side of the pond', Ursula, von der Leyen (a low water mark in human dignity), notes correctly: “We have no idea what happens to our data”, when we create online accounts or log in to private services. Favoring digital ID solves a core problem people have when using the internet—but her promotion of CBDC bears close resemblance to 'being hung' as a cure for hiccups.

It's said that governments are incapable of implementing CBDC—but that won't stop them from an all-out exertion to exact a 'feudal hell' for us. And, were they successful at implementation, the only option left to 'patriots' is piracy with a bit of 'coyote' thrown in.

You know how CBDC will be introduced? 1 size fits all.—what a joy when everything's in 1place—your deeds, car titles, savings, everything—and no one on line will have the ability to steal your info. But no worries, as with our liberty—it's already stolen.

As an aside (not really), Kyoto University is 1 of the top science schools, with many Nobel winners. There, 2 top professors (scientists), have published a definitive paper showing a recent explosion of Omicron is a product of human hands. That its markers show constant reworking to make the virus more easily transmissible to human beings.

But, neither Japanese networks nor medical journals will publish their paper—with objections that its language is too incendiary. So, the professors took to the street, with a mic/handbills, in Kyoto's (Ginza/Time Square), Japanese, constrained as they are, passed by, not hearing what was said. But, videoed, it garnered 11 million online views.

I bring this up to point out the 'official' world is in lockstep to cancel any groundswell of factual information, whether if be about mRNA, Ukraine, stolen elections, or 'sound money'. The war against the censorship is a 'grassroots groundswell' that cannot succeed unless Westerners speak out against 'illegality'—wherever/whenever it appears.

My fellow Americans: Neither the federal government/states have 'rights'—they have 'reserved powers'. 'Rights are what belong to citizens. So, how you gonna deal with agents from 'might is right' tyranny, who show up to question your 'free speech' activities. If they be FBI, will you let them know their agency is unconstitutional, festering in J Edgar, recently involved in likely 'treasonous activity', aiding/abetting theft of the 2020 election. Will you speak up—wrapping yourself in the 'mantle of the Bill of Rights'?

The Constitution is what saves us—but even if the 'statists' were able to 'cancel' the Constitution, they would not be cancelling 'god-given' rights or the history of 'common/natural law', each with a rich history in religious/political ideals—around immortal rights.

Statists attack 'written liberty guarantees' to deflect focus away from where those guarantees came from. Understand that the 'battle is met', with 'inalienable rights' on 1 side, in a fight to the death against a thesis argued in Plato—Book 1—'The Republic', where Socrates takes to task the notion that 'right belongs to the stronger'. Every war fought against every tyranny is over this notion—and reason for our 2nd Amendment.

In the 'heat of battle', we cannot succumb to depression. "Time makes more converts than reason"—and time, for the elite, is grinding away. We are in period of 'late stage globalism' where events can change unexpectedly, and, what elites want, opposed to what they get—is distinct. If economic armageddon arrives before their dictates solidify, instead of total control, they find themselves—under fire—and on the run.

'Disinformation'—don't be fooled by the word. Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes explained the way to test the truth of any statement is to see if it survives in the marketplace of ideas. If human history is the measure, both 'marketplace'/'truth' will prevail.

Actual disinformation comes from the elite: Americans are seeing a truth—that without recognized defensible borders there is no state. And anyone responsible for the loss of our borders is not even a 'statist' unless the term refers to 'globalists.' Trump (with all his boils/warts), defended our borders, while Biden dismisses 'sacred borders'.

On many fronts, especially through lawsuits (supported by the Constitution), evidence against elite malfeasance is coming out. The facts are strong—too predominant. Laws and mandates are being found unconstitutional, with perpetrators be punished.

Again, I've missed my original intention—'need to know', constitutional bullet points—4 words for patriots from the Preamble: establish, insure, provide, promote. My next article—but maybe 2 pages on Israel 1st. A subject—easily as contentious as Ukraine.
