'Time-Lines' Are the Enemy of the 'Narrative'

Those behind the 'elite narrative' cannot abide any open discussion that would involve 'timelines', because timelines, analyzed correctly, are mortal enemies of 'the narrative'.

The 'narrative' is what Tony Hillerman, Navajo mystery writer, calls 'shape shifters', used by elites to end discussion through obfuscation, and when all else fails, 'shift' the discussion to something else. Once able to shift the narrative, they simply move on.

For example, the WEF, is backing-off its 2030 agenda because of too much opposition. Same goes for our buddy Tedros over at WHO: it's tough to get the world to pass governance over to a WHO when Covid fear is nowhere to be found. As a result, the WHO, maybe even the UN, could go away—but not before making a life/death attempt to 'shift' each failing narrative to more fertile ground to scatter the seeds of mendacity.

'Narrative' gets shifted, using rhetoric to get us to look away from where we were focused. A process wherein they replace analysis with persuasion to have us drop long-lingering questions. Shifting the narrative doesn't require re-igniting fears of Covid—they 'put it behind them' without having to 'pay a price'. Later, they can pick it up again.

Now, If we somehow escape the horror of a nuclear war, and a more potent virus fails to appear, and half of the world's population doesn't die from mRNA 'vaccines', and they somehow use the war in Palestine to move the narrative away from the defeat of Ukraine, and the narrative that we are up against extinction because of 'climate change' loses steam, we then get to deal, head on, with inevitable economic collapse.

A coming economic collapse—how close are we—and what events are in play that will make it impossible for the 'shape shifters' to do what they do best, and have us look-away from a coming, abject poverty they are responsible for—to something else?

With timelines, some are more credible and relevant than others. Rational discussion on the war in Ukraine needs to consider events that took place between 2014 and 24 February 2022, when Russia invaded. The timeline that matters for Palestine/Israel strife is not 1000s of years, but begins when the Jews made the decision in 1947 to forge a homeland in Palestine. A 'vaccine' timeline? When Pharma's 78 jabs for kids, began relying on testing results from previous 'vaccines'—never tested. A 'climate change' timeline: all historical weather history data, including post Industrial Revolution.

How close is economic armageddon? Real close, considering lunacies used to keep us back from the edge. 'Shape-shifter Biden', to keep the truth from us, has used all but 17 days of the SPR (Strategic Petroleum Reserve), to shift the narrative away from high energy prices—while at the same time (allegedly—do I even have to say that?), destroyed NordStream. As a result, a once energy independent US, is now in the position of being cut off from BRICS energy, or having Straits of Hormuz blocked.

Either of those 2 things would bring-down the global economy. And, like the respite we got from a 'repo-blowup' papered-over by Covid, was just that, a respite that offered no solution. And now, all this nonsense over easing/tightening—it's just a joke. Powell cannot avoid the mistake Volker made—easing rates—because Volker was dealing with a $1T debt, not a $34/200T debt. There is no way out of this. A nation that cannot pay, will not pay. Any, for any with an economic barometer—each day is a day closer.

A timeline for events/decisions that led to the destruction of the US economy begins with creation of the Fed, in 1913, and with the politics that allowed that. Then forward to the 'Great Depression' and the lead-up to WW2, including economic policies that prolonged the depression, and economic motives elites had for prosecuting that war.

Post WW2, the US made a decision to take control of global economics and politics rather than promote 'free trade' and respect for 'sovereignty' of nations. Those policies brought about a necessity to close the gold window in 1971. Abandoning the 'gold standard' set in motion an uncontrolled credit/debt cycle as well as uncontrolled government growth and control—setting a course for an inevitable US economy collapse.

Generals Biden and Yellen tell us we are the 'god-damned' United States, with unlimited power to fight on as many fronts as our nail-polished, obese army is called on to perform. To that end, we've offered-up 2 aircraft carriers as Persian Gulf sacrifices.

There was $2.5T in the excess repo facility, which has now become $1.2T. Come March, the liquidity in the reserve repo pool will be gone. How did we spend a trillion dollars (maybe more), over a few months? Moot point because nobody cares. Worse than that, a recent poll shows another 'narrative win': Americans prefer violence against critics, 53% democrat—48% republican, as being preferable to constitutional remedies.

Will the Constitution be abandoned, leaving the 'Declaration of Independence' as our only alternative? Rather than coming to terms with having destroyed our nation by destroying the economy, Yellen/Treasury/Fed, continue their 'phony money shell games', using the same failed data collection—to shift the narrative—for one more 'can-kick'.

With a plan to lock us into CBDC and eliminate alternative currencies, why is government getting close to making it possible to trade Bitcoin on the stock exchange? There is no need to search for a conspiracy theory when dealing with the same morons who 'cut and ran' from Afghanistan and did their damndest to lure Russia into invading Ukraine. All the while, defunding the 'fossil fuel' industry in favor of 'sustainable energy, making a $5T investment to lower the use of fossil fuels from 82% to 81%.

I'm old school—never bought Bitcoin—never will. But I'm not stupid—you watch: Bitcoin is a young, small market, likely to double when listed on the stock market. Shutting down Bitcoin is unlikely—more likely Bitcoin takes off as an alternative currency.

What about gold/silver? Gold is 22% of the world's savings/assets. Less than 1/2 of 1% of US assets are in gold—with a 2 decade average of 2%. Return to average would quadruple the price. What happens to the price of gold/silver when the dollar plunges and the US is forced to admit it doesn't have gold? That's the 'gold/silver time-line', 5000 year money, reaching long-awaited 'escape velocity'—after you acquired some?
