Trump Derangement Syndrome

The outcome for the war on Iran is still in question. Iran's economy is oil, set up to pump, load, and deliver. If that flow stops for another 2 weeks, it could take months/years to get production back up. Knowing that, Trump/Netanyahu may be ready to resume the war at an even more ferocious level, attacking civilian infrastructure, to bring Iran down.

Does Iran have the firepower to quell a Trump/Netanyahu strategy (bring down the world's oldest civilization posing no threat to the US), by means of an illegal war of aggression? And will the US employ a strategy of ethicalness murder to make that happen?

Trump Derangement is a subset of a more general affliction shared by both the left/right. Leftists, unable to consider Trump without becoming apoplectic are obviously afflicted, but not unlike some on the right who, because of biblical prophesy, misguided patriotism, or a profit motive, are slow to identify/call out Trump for who he actually is.

This from a reader: Strategically, if I inherited a treasury that had no gold and a Chinese regime in control of rare earth... most silver refining capabilities, I'd try to do all I could to restrict access to oil—a bargaining chip to ensure supplies of the former. The Maduro kidnapping ensures future availability of oil in this hemisphere. Cuba would be just another way to keep China out of the Americas. Wait for the dollar to collapse and you have far less leverage. Trump can now accumulate silver under the guise of it being a strategic material and possibly use it to backstop the dollar after a reset.

From my renter. Trump's doing what he's doing because he inherited a bad situation—he has no other choices. Really? What Trump's doing are the only possible choices?

Trump has a strategy: take control by whatever means, while denying responsibility/accountability. But, it's US foreign policy of regime change/subjugation of nations that made us the pariah we are. Isn't profligate spending on the military rather than infrastructure and US productivity responsible for the condition in which we find ourselves?

You know what's missing in the American character? Any sense of fairness/justice. We have been top of the heap for so long, we assume it—and if Trump can get that for us, he gets our support. Israel was at one time worthy (post holocaust), of our compassion. But now, with 82% of Israelis favoring disposing of everyone in Gaza—Israel rates only condemnation. Is this what happens to top dogs empires—in the end hated across the globe?

An economic pundit (who will go unnamed), that I listen to each week, holds back from criticizing Trump—instead calls himself a patriot. Unfortunately, the same rational existed in 1930's Germany—to not speak out against Hitler. It was then and now—aiding and abetting murder.

Unfortunately (for reasons I don't understand), readers of mine who are Christians, leaning right, have a difficult time seeing Trump as the murderer, pirate, slaughterer of women/children that he is. I mean, c'mon, how bright do you have to be to get it that either Trump is as ignorant as it gets—or is fully controlled by Zionist money? Or worse, Netanyahu has the Epstein goods on Trump, and Trump will be exposed—if he falters.?

Viewing the leftists, how bright does one have to be to get it that Biden, calling Putin a murderer (when Putin had no choice but to invade Ukraine), then scuttling an agreed-to peace proposal and refusing to conduct diplomacy with Russia for 3 years, is responsible for the death of millions and the destruction of Ukraine—maybe bringing WW3 to the world?

Another reader: You say there's no strategy behind Trump's endless blunders. Two questions....why do you think they're blunders and what makes you think what he's doing is not a strategy? It's an obvious strategy if you are purposefully weakening the dollar, entering into a multipolar world where the US is not the only superpower...it might be the G4 or G5. Some articles showing the shift to MP. They are slow walking this to reality. Everyone thinks we're 'blundering' because we're weakening on purpose.

Trump obviously has a strategy—the same one used by any tyrant to take what's not his. It's a blunder because humanity has just enough humanity to recognize tyrants and eradicate them (the 1000 Year Reich was gone in less than a decade). There is no strategy to weaken the dollar to enter multiculturalism on equal terms. Trump (and his whole cabinet), are buffoons grasping for the last vestiges of power and control.

Something from Zoltan Pozsar: Again, the game is not to control Venezuela and Iran but to choke China. You might ask why Trump is squeezing China? The aim is not to deny energy to China. The aim is to level the playing field between the two countries. To be blunt, in ways I couldn't be at Credit Suisse: if you fuck me on rare earths, I fuck you on energy.

Let me see if I understand. While we whiled away our future, China did the hard, dirty work developing rare earths. Trump (US Government Elite), share a mission to subjugate China—and the US is incapable of producing weapons for that without rare earths. So, if China refuses to give us rare earths, the US, by means of piracy/war of aggression, deprives China of energy, until they give us means to do them in—on our terms?

A curious phenomena, from those who speak of strategy without ethics, or simply haven't done needed research, involves having to explain myself to readers. If someone is incurious/not done the research, they invariably demand to know from where I get my spurious information. I'm done with that. As in an email, just received, from a reader who takes me to task—often: 'Not being too picky here, but I have some questions about your statements.' He proceeds to question everything I wrote—wanting sources.

Here's the deal, I'm not your shrink. For whatever reasons you can't see Trump/Obama/Biden for who they are, those are your issues, not mine. Going forward, I have no desire to get into a debate with you, or any of the non-curious. It's just my 2 pages—do your own research.

Enough said? Next article, I'll get into how to deal with critics and blue state neighbors. Let's come up with the few basic facts that are not up for debate. Beyond that, remember the 1st rule for a boxer: protect yourself at all times. Avoid being sucked into the rabbit hole (that has no bottom). Learn the basic lesson early—with a smile, quiet your heart—and just say no.

The only way I gain new readers is from the middle—not the right or left. If you know someone who might benefit from my articles, please forward so that I can maintain subscribers against un-subscribers. Get my articles by e-mail with a request, or comment: erik@neverhadaboss.com.

And, thank you.
