Trump Goes Shakespearean

What do you get with Trump? What do you lose with Trump? Women don't have to share bathrooms with biological males, and we get to continue our romance with internal combustion. If electric vehicles prove better in the long run, they're not better now (without free trade with China), they cost too much. Electric vehicle sales are down 50% in the US.

With Trump we get a cutback on globalist controls, the kind that are evidenced in 2026 Subarus where, if you gaze off to the mountains while driving, the alarms go off. And if you continue to enjoy driving, your car just pulls off the road and quits running. Globalist see us as children needing protection. Now, they actually want to control/dominate/enslave us.

If Trump loses the midterms this fall (he seems well on his way), we get the idiots back. But, if Trump gets rid of Thomas Massie and keeps either the House and or Senate, he gets to continue on with his nationalism agenda. And, what exactly is that?

Basically, its a delusion wherein the US remains the hegemony, controlling global oil supply and reducing China/Russia/BRICS into servitude. How does Trump's nationalism compare to getting the globalists back? Whatever happens in the fall, we are screwed. And it's quite possible Trump's agenda proves more inhumane/nefarious than the left?

Shakespeare found a lusty laugh hidden within most things, but characters such as Macbeth, the stuff of tragedy, are occupants of a dark horror, once set in motion, allowing no possibility for a return from consequences of decisions made—no return to sanity.

For Trump, as President of the United States, to absolve himself of responsibility for the destruction of Iran, an ancient seat of civilization, in an attempt to assist an insane murderer, Netanyahu, and lunatic, Zionist Israel, is again the stuff of Shakespearean tragedy.

Bob Dylan's intention with 'one should never be where one does not belong', forewarns the fateful Oval Office scene with Trump—once again beguiled by Bibi. Or do I have it wrong? Has the US always had the lead role, using Netanyahu as the excuse?

Whichever it is, Netanyahu is protected from insanity by a thick skin of evil. But Trump, a tragic figure, either under the spell of Zionism, or acting out inexorable, unquestioned US Foreign Policy, is subject, by necessity, to psychological, unforeseen inevitability. Whether Trump is under the hypnotic spell of Zion, or agent in stupor for inhumane US Empire, he is but a hapless fool—as he makes his slide into insanity.

Did Trump really think Xi was going to help him destroy a nation, Iran, which, like China, supports national sovereignty? Does Trump think that after all his lies, Putin will stick his neck out for him? Or, do each, Xi and Putin, sit back and watch the US collapse?

As the world watched, maybe already past the point of no return, Trump accepted Iran's 10 points for negotiation (but just for a moment). What were those points that Iran has now reduced to 5?

1. Ending the war on all fronts, including Lebanon

2. Lifting all sanctions
3. Releasing frozen Iranian assets
4. Compensation for war damages and losses
5. Recognition of Iran's sovereign rights over the Strait of Hormuz

Trump now refers to the remaining 5 points as garbage. He read the 1st one and threw them away. Why's that? He can't possible go against Bibi on genocide/occupation of Lebanon. Why not? Lebanon is a place that won't bend a knee to tyranny.

Instead, Trump offers his 5 points:

1. No war compensation from US
2. Give up 400kg of Highly Enriched Uranium to US
3. Iran can only have one nuclear facility to remain active
4. Not more than 25% of frozen assets to be unfreezed
5. Halting war on all fronts depends on negotiations

Let's consider the 2 sets of talking points. Trump's 1st: he agreed earlier, before Netanyahu changed Trump's mind, that the cease fire included Lebanon (for Bibi it cannot as Israel is already moving (settlers?) into South Lebanon). Under the JCPOA (that Trump *canned), Iran adhered exactly to the terms of nuclear enrichment—making ridiculous Trump's 3rd point. The US has been starving Iran since they ousted the Shah, so why not keep 75% of the sanctions (at Trump's choice), on. Halting the wars depends on negotiations? The US is negotiation/agreement incapable—why bother?

Iran's demands: Of course Lebanon is included. If anything, other than having Hezbollah to protect them from their own government and Bibi, they are innocents. Yes, get rid of sanctions that are in place to bring a nation to heel by starving the population. Yes, give back assets that belong to Iran (give Russia back its assets also). 4/5 go together. The US/ Israel is conducting a war of aggression on Iran, with an intent of regime change—not nuclear disarmament. It's never mentioned on Sunday talk shows. Iran needs to control the Strait and charge a toll unless the US pays to rebuild Iran.

Get ready for possibly the darkest period in US history because what we've been warned about is about to happen. The US is about to become a 4th world pariah without ever having become a 3rd world nation. 2/3 years from now, unless Trump shortens the time horizon by re-invigorating Iran attacks, our nation will be unrecognizable, either as a result of nuclear exchange, or if we are more fortunate—the soon to arrive economic collapse.

For those of you who refuse to face it—face it. Iran kicked our ass and is ready to do it again. Warfare has changed and the US is ill-prepared for it.

With all this in mind, I've been working far too hard, building/maintaining. As an American I deserve to burn some fuel on the backroads. With the possibility of the left returning this fall, I want to log many bike/car backroad miles while I can. Eisenhower built an interstate highway system for Americans like myself (forgive my language)—so get the fuck out of my way!
