When Bullshit Gets Reported as Fact

Listening to MSN, one might think that a Chinese tanker heading out of the Gulf, laden with Iranian oil, that gets turned around by a US blockade, is actually breaking some law rather than the whim of demented King Trump. It makes me wonder how long the Chinese/Russians will put up with this nonsense and what happens when they don't?

Consider the analogy: you and your buddy are walking home from school past the bully who takes lunches from smaller kids. But you 2 are not smaller kids. You've been working out and doing striking/grappling/submission work for years. Besides, there's 2 of you and 1 of him. Either of you can take him—you've been holding back.

But, when his hubris gets to be too much, and he's taking your lunch, at some point enough is enough. Leading into WW2, the US cut off Japan from oil and rubber, which brought about Pearl Harbor. China has a pipeline from Russia but that's not enough oil for the world's biggest economy and a billion and a half people. When's enough, enough?

Knowing what I'm about to say will not be met with wild approval—I don't much care. There's 3 kinds of people in the world: the best are those with a sense of justice for others. Iran heads that list. Yeah, I know: you hate Muslims and Iran's a theocracy. Actually, it's not—it's a democracy—of factions

To the degree it's a theocracy, that came about in 1953 when the US deposed Iran's secular leader—and the theocracy rallied to save the nation.

Who the Iranians are is a people willing to die for other's freedom and sovereignty—willing to die for Palestine/Lebanon/Yemen. That's what got them branded as terrorists—a willingness to face-off against Zionism.

Yemen/Hezbollah are also on the good-guy list. Then comes the 2nd tier nations with ethical/religious values from a cultural history that appeals to justice, as does the Confucian/Mencius cultural history of China—and justice, as it is laid-out in the Russian orthodox church—teachings of Christ.

Then there's the worst, that are in it for themselves, with little regard for sovereignty and liberty. That's the EU where you can go to jail for questioning Ukrainian/Israeli motives. Most EU nations fit this category, along with disparate, erstwhile allies of NATO and the US.

At last we arrive at the worst of the worst (Israel/US)—you decide which is worst. Each of the 2 nations has fallen from on high. Post holocaust, the world was sympathetic towards Israel and what they suffered under the Nazis. Yeah, there was contention about how they stole Palestinian homelands, but they had suffered so much—they belonged—with a right to exist.

And the United States—the beacon of hope for the whole world. Our literature reflected concern for the little guy. Our films extolled the virtues of fairness and abundance brought about through the Constitution/Bill of Rights. The United States—the banner of freedom—that all democratic-leaning nations chose to model themselves on.

But that was then and this is now. The US bears no semblance to earlier virtues of our republic, viewed in terms of it's 1st century of existence. Gone (without a whimper), is any sense of justice or concern for the little guy. 'God bless the United States—and no one else.' We are that sacred nation, loved by God. Our children can't play on the front lawn/playground because we need to oversee them/make them safe—they are the children of God.

God's children are the children of the Empire. And besides, this is not a safe world. But who made it unsafe? Who rendered kids in need of constant protection of parents—parents who need the constant protection of state?

Israel is likely worse. Without concern for its own population, its neighbors, or the world, Israel rides roughshod over any in its way—justifying genocide for glory of Greater Israel, 'from the river to the sea'—at any cost.

So, what's the analogy that depicts the relationship between Netanyahu/Trump? I've compared Trump to a modern-day Hitler—and that analogy works (both Hitler/PolPot wiped clean a nation's laws—trusting their own discretion). But more valid is to bring Mussolini into the picture. Hitler was the force that controlled Italy and Mussolini, just as Netanyahu/Israel now control the US Congress and Trump.

Granted, the US has the military might but the use of it is in the hands of Zion—as seen when Bibi made his anxious visit to the White House in December last year to get this war against Iran scheduled. Trump voiced some doubt, but he approved the schedule.

Trump, under Zionist control is better portrayed as the Mussolini figure—right up to the jutting jaw. Netanyahu, the Hitler guy, angry, without remorse—from whom no one is safe—is the greatest Anti-Semite. Trump seems more compassionate, but his stupidity/greed dovetails with a Netanyahu willingness to commit mass slaughter for personal gain. Friends that say Trump may be smarter than he seems—playing a winning hand by cutting-off China from what it needs to retain growth/competitiveness.

But, I don't find Trump intelligent simply because he's behind a plan to take away from the bully, China, what it needs to function in the world. The reason being that the US/Israel are the bullies, and neither is capable of taking on China military—nor Russia neither.

What happens when Iran/China/Russia/BRICS stand-up to the Zionist Empire. If there is a God, will that God come out on the side of the Zionist Empire? If God is all-knowing, God knows who follows teachings of God's children (a shout-out to major religions that share more than not). In the US, if there is a military draft to go after nations that break US arbitrary rules, do we rally around an ungodly flag—bent on conquest?

I'm asking a serious question here: if Trump (or the next Dem), takes us into WW3 in a feast of lies about China breaking all the rules—buying oil from Iran/Venezuela, do we send young Americans to die by the millions—to bolster the price of West Texas crude? Do we offer up our children on the altar of Trump/Hegseth as tribute to Lucifer?
