When the Past is Disallowed—The Future Becomes Certain

In a world where crocodiles, sometimes more than 20 feet long and weighing more than a tonne, have learned over 3 million years to use the sound of rain on the water to obscure their presence, position themselves and wait with only their eyes above the water, sometimes for 3 days, as a seamless tactic to take prey approaching the river for water. Along with wildebeest and deer, they take thousands of humans—each year.

At a time, when it may be more dangerous to be a human being than at any other time, when we need warnings to keep our wits about us, Shakespeare's tales and Brothers Grimm fairy tales, in Britain, their land of origin, now come with a warning of violence, as something for young persons to avoid. It's elites, reminding us of our inability to see and deal with the world as it is—inept to plot a strategy of survival that we arrive at on our own.

In a world where the West is utterly propagandized to think the worst of China, Russia, and Iran, China is viewed more favorably in 26 of 37 countries surveyed, including US allies/neighbors Canada, France, Germany, Mexico, and Britain. We are deeply propagandized, dulling our collective senses such that we allow a moron with orange hair to dismantle the world.

Various political entities are always opposed to the 1st Amendment. Simply stated, it's an age-old conundrum: does truth come out of debate, or does truth need protected from debate. For the creators of the 1st Amendment, open debate made the republic possible. But for elites (think back on Covid), truth needs to be protected from debate.

During Covid everything was done to protect so-called experts from scrutiny. Even now, with the passage of time exposing the lies and propaganda used to keep elites from having to account for the facts around the virus and mRNA, we have somehow returned to that place where a neighbor tells me 5 of his friends in their 60's have serious heart problems, but there is no mention of mRNA injury—because there is nothing to see here?

It's not just mRNA—it's about everything. Both US political parties are avoidance vehicles from facts—from the truth. And the type of censorship that will be brought to bear on Americans is to be decided by which political party takes control in November.

Most politicians are in it for themselves. Rubio and Vance are neck and neck for the republican nomination for president, at 39%, followed by Don, Jr. at 12%. From the rhetoric, it's obvious that Vance/Rubio are more concerned with winning the office than what is good for Americans—both advocating continuance of wars—as a path to election.

Do you, like me, sense a shift from the open debate/no debate as means of preserving the United States to something terrifying? Gone are the days when Supreme Court findings advocated for a messy political environment (as intended), with ongoing contention around issues of contention. Debate as an unacceptable way to work through our problems is bad enough, but what about a Hollywood, b-level horror film—in real time—intended to cancel the 1st Amendment functioning within the individual?

This is the stuff of 1984/Hunger Games. This is the ultimate servitude/slavery. This relegates liberty/freedom to the dustbin of history. This is what we see with individuals taking whatever mRNA comes their way for whatever—with no questions asked. And this is not just a small segment of the population—it's a majority on both sides of the aisle.

For global political reality, is it a simple truth, that the US, lacking the capacity to inflict its power to control the world, is opting instead to destroy the Global South faster than those nations can rebuild from the destruction wrought upon them by a US tyranny?

Consider Putin, driving through Novosibirsk, the 3rd largest Russian City (I rode through there on my motorcycle ride around the world), where swelling crowds of adoring fans lined the streets, forcing Vladimir out of his car to walk among them. Security be damned—they love him. I fall for some US propaganda about Putin, who is at 75% approval rating, and will be in the 80's in mid-September after he wins Russian elections.

Russians don't want out of the war with Ukraine—they want it over—to win it. And (like myself), some buy into the criticism that Putin moves too slow. Instead, he counters every Ukrainian move to where he is now starving Ukraine/Zelensky into submission.

So, what is left for Trump who contends he controls the Strait of Hormuz (he controls nothing). His last gasp is to launch a ground invasion of Iran, without air power, using other people's children. A slaughter for whomever takes up the Trump's mantle.

Iran has all the cards. They are producing missiles faster than they use them, and there is nothing Trump can do about it. Turkey, Saudi Arabia, and Pakistan have signed a mutual defense pact, that amounts to security agreements without US involvement. It's crude and politically motivated, but it speaks to nations wanting out from under the US yoke, nations that want to flex sovereignty among nations with whom they share proximity.

Iran, driving the US out of the Middle East is the beginning of hope for a world where smaller nations might get a voice. And the defeat of the US on the global stage provides the hopefulness we've been missing for so long.

The US model of AI, created by the likes of Trump, on a mega basis, with the underpinning of a profit motive, will fail, and the Chinese, inexpensive, open source model will prevail—to be adopted by innovators.

Hopefully, many the innovators will be Americans, using Chinese software as entrepreneurs to make their way forward. Just as hot rodders in the 1950's moved the automotive industry forward, young visionary Americans may once again bring the Steve Jobs mentality to the fore, using cobbled-together computers and software to MAGA.

Americans need to disassociate from our government—as much as possible, to go it alone. 6M Jews dies at the hands of the Nazis, and now there are 600K dead in Gaza, and that doesn't count the dead in Lebanon, Syria, Iran. Is Israel going for the genocide record? Is Trump going for 'dishonorable mention', or does he want the record for himself?

Jesus preached that 'love is good—hate is evil'. Is that now hate speech? When readers castigate me, citing scripture as God's support for Trump, I'm reminded that Jesus would be disgusted, if not horrified by Trump. Christ would be ashamed of Trump supporters.

To be able to participate in the coming little guy rebellion, we need the means. The future is not about ciphers—it's about real things. And there is nothing more real than the sound of silver coins in your pocket. From what I see, silver is the little guy future and we don't have long to get on that train.
