Will 'White' Conservatives Allow Themselves to be Cancelled?

Millions of refugees from the Middle East, mainly from Syria, made possible by US Foreign Policy, arrived in Germany (and other nations that failed to weigh consequences), to a reception of a small 'teddy bear' and a plastic bottle of water from Angela Merkel. Now, at the Southern US border, 5 million Biden-inspired invaders (not immigrants or refugees), without proof of 'vaccination' have entered the United States.

What possible explanation can there be for Trump's desire for a wall to secure our borders, devolving into a man who allows any unvetted to come across? There is no good reason, only delusion, steeped in horror, from a demented, old, angry white man, opening our nation to a reputed 5 million brown persons—then shuttling them about.

The motivation for uncontrolled 'invasion from the South' is purposed in support of 'collective globalism', with a mission to impose heartless 'feudal control', after dismantling Europe/US infrastructure—and the cancellation of the United States Constitution.

It's one thing to think about the end of Germany, where both industry and citizens march obediently into an energy-deprived future—with prospects for unbearable winters and starvation. It's another to watch 'white conservative America' under attack for past wrongs—and accused of genetic, racial predispositions. As in Greta Thunberg's shrill insistence that because of past CO2 release the West needs to make reparations to the world. And because 'climate change' does not rise to the level of science, instead relying on rhetoric/propaganda to push it forward, reparations are now assumed.

It is also assumed that 'white conservatives', especially males, are complicit in terrorism, such that their children in public schools need to be educated to the fact that the parents are 'endemically racist' and to be avoided/sidelined. More than that, white conservatives (those who voted for Trump), like the plot of the Tom Cruise movie: "Minority Report", are viewed and called-out as 'domestic terrorist' perpetrators of future crime, requiring surveillance and tracking—to head-off violent acts yet to be committed.

White America is none of the above. This is a ruse—but to what end? CO2 destruction/climate change are inconclusive, and, as with necessity for mRNA jabs, because there is no real science behind either, dictate implementation requires coercion/force.

So, why is this dismemberment of our culture and our economic infrastructure taking place? The West is 'carrying water' for Klaus Schwab and those behind a grand push for 'collective equity'. And these are those who care less about global warming or fossil fuels/CO2, because, if they did, they would abandon private jets/Davos for Zoom.

Because elite luminaries know best and are always right, they are free to abandon those things in the Bill of Rights that make us Americas. To that end, they do nothing to insure free and fair elections because that is the last thing they want. It is somehow suits the 'left' for elections to drag on until they somehow win—or the opposition tires.

Did the 'left' rob the midterms? I don't know, but I see a 'disparate disbursement' of election standards among the states, making it such that we don't know if our vote was counted, or some were counted more than once, or non-citizens tipped the scale.

Which leaves me in a peculiar place: 2 things I enjoyed about the 1950's were: the TV night when they pulled the cloth cover from the new car model: "America, I give you the 1956 Chevrolet Bel Air, 2 door, creme on red." That's gone—I don't know a 2021 from a 2022. And, I stayed up late with Walter Cronkite on many an election night. This Tuesday was the last—they can have it—I don't want it—they don't play fair, anyway.

While confused 'white Americans, bewildered over how dems with such low approval ratings held onto the Senate, they wait for the next election, the one that will be fair, the one they can look forward to making it right. But I'm done. I'm gone—it's way past over.

Maybe it was a 'red tide' and conservatives swept away the democrats. But without transparent election fairness, it sits there like the Kennedy Assassination: we suspect but we don't bet our 'first born' (double or nothing), that we know what happened.

The focus now (with the 'left' maintaining power), has to be on a doubling-down by the 'collective', pushing narratives and dictates these next 2 years to insure that dissent is quelled, entrepreneurship crushed, and fossil-fuel ravaged. And, as with the 'vaccines' (if one assumes that WEF/DAVOS is tied to Malthusian depopulation), even if either plan goes askew, as long as it causes a reduction on population—why worry?

One of my readers occasionally asks me why I don't write about some good news? I look for neither 'good or bad'—just the ties that bind—connecting dots for an overview.

Besides, Don McLean said it much better than I could: "I met a girl who sang the blues. And I asked her for some happy news. She just turned and walked away." But let me share something: It you came up bright, in bad circumstances, much of your life is a struggle to find equilibrium in insanity, in a waged-war between contempt and compassion. Finding that balance is personal, and the greatest challenge for a person.

Also, if one spends one's days researching and tying-up loose ends towards an overview, that practice garners courage, through a realization that what matters for the United States is the Constitution and Bill of Rights, and that 'feeble brained', evil little shits, even if they have the power to do great harm—are ultimately of no consequence.

Even with a red-wave over Miami/Dade and across Florida where much of the voting was done by pencil and paper, US Republicans, scantily, get the US House, where some of their number are 'RINOs', bought and sold (by and to the left). So, what to expect from the 'election' (in quotes like 'vaccines')? An even greater onslaught of 'power plays' from the Biden/Obama cartel to shut us up by any means necessary. This will happen under un-watchful eyes of conservatives who don't get that Obama, clever and twisted as he is, is the best candidate for a guy who brings down the US Constitution.

So be ready, as they try to enslave or cancel you—especially if you are old, white, male, armed, of means, and addicted to internal combustion—but they can't pull it off.
